Winds: Easterly today then shifting to the east-southeast tonight with speeds of 16 to 24mph with gusts in showers peaking near 35mph.

Seas: 1.2 to 1.8 metres or 4 to 6 feet.

Weather Forecast for St. Kitts & Nevis: Weather today: Cloudy and slightly hazy with a 70 percent or high chance of showers in the morning; and overcast in the afternoon with showers and a 50 percent or moderate chance of thunderstorms. Some of the showers today may be moderate and as such some minor street flooding is possible. If this materialize, some possible inconveniences may be experienced by road users.

Weather tonight: Cloudy and hazy with a 70 percent or high chance of showers.

Possible rainfall total for the forecast period is 6 and 19 mm or 0.25 to 0.75 inch

Eastern Caribbean Forecast: A moderately active tropical wave will bring unsettled weather conditions to the Eastern Caribbean today and tonight. Cloudy to overcast skies, showers, thunderstorms, and gusty winds are expected across Trinidad, north to the Leeward Islands. Periods of heavy downpours are also expected across the islands. Meanwhile during the day, low moisture levels will keep the chances of showers at moderate for the most part in the regions of the Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. However, the tropical wave advancing west into the area tonight and Wednesday morning with deep moisture and high instability will increase the chances of showers and thunderstorms.
